

24 May 1979

The primary Soviet source of influence on the international scene is their military capability.

This is also a source of weakness for them. It gives countries a concern as to where and how that military capability will be employed.